Locked analysis design: separating molecular representation from clinical-outcome transport